Synopsis book

- First such book exploring Brigitte Singh's pioneering work
 - Enhanced with 5 augmented reality videos available on a custom-made app
 - Features essays by several noted scholars
 - Features many previously unseen photographs
- Brigitte Singh first came to Sanganer, Jaipur's hand-blockprinting center, as a student of miniatures three decades ago. Today, the visual almanac of her work gives us a truly alternate way to read medieval and modern civilizational encounters - through the evolution and transmission of motifs and craft techniques over centuries. Brigitte Singh's exquisite work with blockprints is a form of re-enacted design history, rendered in visual rather than textual terms. Uncovering and reaching down to the purer forms, to the composite aesthetic of the 18th century, it offers a singular source of access to a seminal epoch in design. This volume illustrates how Singh has approached her craft with an archeological devotion, peeling off dusty layers from the long-obscured

The background of the entire cover is a dense, repeating pattern of Mughal garden motifs. It features stylized flowers in various colors (white, blue, pink, and green) with intricate detailing, set against a deep red background. The pattern is reminiscent of traditional Indian textile designs like the 'Gulistan' or 'Bagh' motifs.
