Synopsis book

The first in-depth look at the marine hero who has become one of the most beloved and admired men in America today: Secretary of Defense James Mattis. A devout student of history and erudite reader revered by rank and file soldiers, officers, academics, politicians, and ordinary citizens, General James Mattis is one of the most admired leaders serving America today. A man who has long used his position as a model for the soldiers he leads, Mattis in 2003 shared a "Message to All Hands" with the men and women under his command, outlining their responsibilities as soldiers of the corps. Emphasizing the importance of the mission and the goal to act with honor, Mattis ended with the motto he had adopted from another great figure, Roman general Lucius Cornelius Sulla: "Demonstrate to the world that there is No Better Friend, No Worse Enemy than a US Marine." The first Trump presidential cabinet nominee, Mattis, retired from active military duty for only three years at the time, received

No Better Friend, No Worse Enemy: The Life of General James Mattis by Jim Proser

A close-up, color portrait of General James Mattis. He is looking slightly to the right of the camera with a serious expression. He is wearing a dark green military uniform with a high standing collar. On the collar, there are four dark buttons. On the right side of the collar, there is a small, dark, circular insignia. To the right of the insignia, there are several colorful, rectangular ribbons or awards. The background is dark and out of focus.
