Synopsis book

Brilliant, daring, and ahead of her time, Ann Petry (1908-1997) is one of the unsung American writers of the last century. Born in Old Saybrook, Connecticut, and trained in the family business as a pharmacist, she moved to Harlem in 1938 and began working for the radical newspaper The Peoples Voice. The pervasive poverty and racism she witnessed there inspired her unforgettable debut novel, The Street, published in 1946. A work of crackling intensity, The Street is told in the voice of Lutie Johnson, a single mother whose efforts to claim a share of the American Dream for herself and her young son meet frustration at every turn. Opening a fresh perspective on the realities and challenges of black, female, working-class life, The Street quickly became the first novel by an African American woman to sell more than a million copies. Faced with newfound fame and unwanted literary celebrity, Petry returned to the relative quiet of Connecticut to write her most ambitious novel, The Beat, in 1953.
